

A Kenya Wildlife Service officer arranges a stackpile of ivory for burning. KIA has recorded 51 seizures in 238 cases in seven years.

KIA records the highest seizures of ivory in seven years

BY MICHAEL MURIEL

Kenya's Wildlife Service (KWS) has recorded 51 seizures of ivory in 238 cases in seven years, a record for the country.

The highest number of seizures was recorded in 2009, with 25 cases. This was followed by 2010, with 20 cases.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.

The Wildlife Service has been working to reduce the illegal ivory trade in Kenya since 2007.