

PHOTO STORY

Tourism PS Fatuma Mohamed with acting Utalii College principal Kazungu Mwangi present an award to Stephanie Wangari, best student in food production, during the graduation ceremony /COURTESY

GOOD FOR YOU

Unilever's new-look Royco targets clients keen on health

CYNTHIA ILAKO/Unilever East Africa says the recent relaunch of its 30-year old food additive Royco, was necessary after it incorporated natural sun-dried ingredients to retain health-conscious consumers. "Our insights show that consumers are more conscious of healthy eating than past generations," Unilever marketing director Agnes Kitololo said in a statement. "They are also more interested in finding food adventures; food that delivers a new flavour or new take on healthy indulgences." The 2016 Food Trends Report by international research firm Global Food Forum shows food that deliver on both health and convenience is gaining wider distribution.

DIFFICULT TIMES

Emirates may cut Africa flights, cites money challenges

REUTERS/Emirates airline could reduce the frequency of its flights to African cities or cut routes completely if current economic and financial challenges on the continent continue, President Tim Clark told reporters yesterday. Foreign airlines flying to Nigeria have started to refuel abroad because jet fuel supplies there have become more expensive and scarce as the country battles a