

Utalii should manage Ronald Ngala college

For more than four decades, Kenya Utalii College (KUC) has remained the institution of choice for those who want to pursue a career in the hospitality and tourism industry.

Because of the quality of training KUC offers and the increased demand for skilled manpower, the college cannot meet industry human resource needs. The entry of major global brands requires more technical personnel. Expanding the human resource base is a matter of priority.

The construction of the Ronald Ngala Utalii College was long overdue. Coming at a time of acute shortage of skilled human resource for the ever-expanding industry, Ronald Ngala Utalii College is a welcome move. The facility should be managed by Kenya Utalii College. Ronald Ngala Utalii will benefit from skilled and experienced teaching staff of the college.

{Benard Amaya. via email}

highest bidder. Meanwhile, those with court cases might have waivers or may benefit from a permanent postponement of their cases while they buy time so even if they are not voted back they will still have pocketed enough for retirement.

Francis Kiranga

Any ODM MP from Nyanza defecting is committing political suicide. What they need to know is that Jubilees aware that they add no value whatsoever to Jubilee's chances in Nyanza. So the two might as well start preparing for their retirement.

Oggy King

The writing is on the wall for ODM in Migori and the wider southern Nyanza. The Migori governor might not seek re-election on an ODM ticket. Even MPs will not vie using ODM. Until this party improves its internal democracy and eliminates political conmanship, it will not survive in the region. ODM is run like a private entity by a clique of leaders from Siaya and Kisumu who are close to Raila Odinga. If he doesn't take care